Ford shrugs off transit vote

Mayor's subway plan defeated at council meeting ◐ He still expects provincial support ◐ Revived light-rail plan will potentially free up $1.9 billion, according to TTC Chair Karen Stintz, who had called yesterday's meeting

[illegible] city council's will, Mayor Rob Ford has called his resounding defeat on Wednesday over Toronto's transit plan irrelevant.

He is urging the province to build subways even though council voted 25-18 in favour of an above-ground LRT plan.

"Technically speaking, that whole meeting was irrelevant," said the mayor, after councillors voted to go with a competing transit plan championed by his former ally, TTC chair Councillor Karen Stintz.

"The premier, I'm very confident, is going to continue building subways," Ford told reporters following the full-day special council session to declare Toronto's preference for spending $8.4 billion in provincial transit funding.

But Stintz said she had no doubt that the province will consider council "supreme."

"They asked council to make a decision, and I think the decision tonight was decisive," she said.

The approved plan calls for returning to the light-rail scenario approved by the city, the TTC and the province in 2009, under former mayor David Miller. It includes street-level light rail on Finch Avenue West, and on Eglinton, east of Laird Drive. Eglinton would still run underground from about Black Creek Drive to Laird.

But, in an olive branch to Ford, a decision on whether it will be subway or LRT on Sheppard East was referred to an expert panel to report back by March 31. Ford came to office on the promise of building all new transit underground.

"We do think, as a council, it was important that we support the mayor in that commitment and we allow further time and further options to find funding for Sheppard," Stintz said.

A statement by Ontario Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation Bob Chiarelli confirmed that Metrolinx will consider the decision's impacts on current transit planning and report back as quickly as possible. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Look up: Toronto's gone vertical

When Debrah and Joel Weiss first moved to Toronto, they wanted nothing more than a proper house with a sprawling yard and lush garden.

Four decades later, the retired couple is part of the condo craze.

Wednesday's first results of the 2011 census show that a small downtown pocket — from Lake Ontario, north to Front Street, west to Bathurst Street and east to Spadina Avenue — has seen explosive growth in the last several years.

The census echoes what everyone's been saying: That Toronto has gone vertical.

In 2006, the population in the area that includes Harbourfront and the old railway lands stood at 1,106 people.

As of last year that had skyrocketed to 5,911 — a 434 per cent increase.

That's more than triple the average population density of about 4,150 people per square kilometre for the rest of the city.

Milton: Canada's fastest growing city

◗ Population of Ontario grows by 5.7 per cent ◗ Latest figures show growth happening closer to Toronto

Take a bow Milton, you're Canada's fastest growing city.

The city on Toronto's outskirts grew a whopping 56.5 per cent to 84,362 residents between 2006 and 2011, according to new Statistics Canada figures released Wednesday.

Whitchurch-Stouffville, another suburban Toronto community, rang in at number three with a 54.3 per cent jump to 37,628 residents.

New census data shows the population of the metropolitan area of Toronto outpaced the national growth rate over the last five years — a period of time that saw the country spiral into the most serious economic tailspin since the Great Depression.

The area's growth rate was above the national growth rate of 5.9 per cent, while the population of Ontario increased by 5.7 per cent.

Toronto's population rose 4.5 per cent from 2006. Spikes in several areas of the city likely had to due with increases in condo living, say experts.

This census shows a change in the growth pattern in the Greater Toronto Area, said Jane Badets, director general of social and demographics statistics with Statistics Canada. Unlike the 2006 census, which showed growth happening on the suburban periphery, the latest counts show the growth happening closer to Toronto itself.

"It's shifted down slightly, it's come in closer to what we call the central municipality, around Markham and Richmond (Hill)," she said in an interview. THE CANADIAN PRESS/ TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

News in brief

Pedestrian struck by bus

RUN OVER. A woman suffered life-threatening injuries when she was struck by a bus at Weston Road and Finch Avenue West on Wednesday.

Police said both of the 25-year-old pedestrian's legs were run over by the bus around 4:30 p.m. She was taken to Sunnybrook hospital.

The intersection has been closed while police try to figure out how the accident occurred.

Cook jailed for strangling wife

He was under a domestic assault restraint order during time of killing

A Toronto cook who strangled his wife while their newborn son lay in a nearby bedroom has been sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Mizan Ahmed was under a court order not to communicate with his wife, Tahmina Yeasmin, 23, after he was charged with domestic assault.

But he persisted in contacting her, and visited her at the Vanauley Walk apartment — in the Spadina Avenue and Dundas Street West area — where she and their 10-day-old son still lived with his parents.

▶ Tahmina Yeasmin, 23, was strangled by her husband Mizan Ahmed on Aug. 28, 2008.

Yeasmin was found dead in the apartment bathtub with a scarf, knotted in the middle, around her neck on Aug. 28, 2008. The scarf was left to make it look like she had committed suicide, court heard.

Ahmed's family reported she had tried to take her own life in the past — by hanging herself in the bathroom — and police at first believed her death was self-inflicted.

But after a pathologist determined her cause of death — ligature neck compression — could have been administered by another person, the homicide squad investigated.

Ahmed, 26, was charged with second-degree murder. In January, he pleaded guilty to manslaughter.

Mississauga passes 7.4% tax increase, rejects pay hike

Despite describing their approved raise as a "few drops" in a flood that's about to gush "over the dam," Mississauga council voted unanimously Wednesday to reverse last week's decision to give themselves a 2 per cent pay hike.

The decision came as councillors approved the city's 2012 budget, along with a 7.4 per cent tax hike — but not before they heard charges of fiscal mismanagement from citizens' groups complaining that Mississauga's council is already the highest paid in Canada.

"I will be reversing my vote," said Coun. Nando Iannicca, who had supported the council raise at last week's budget committee meeting.

Iannicca, responding to the citizen comments, had pointed out that the politicians' pay hike represented a "few drops" in the budget bucket. "What do we do to forestall all the water coming over the dam?" he asked representatives of the Mississauga Residents' Associations' Network (MIRANET), suggesting the group should look at larger efficiencies to help taxpayers.

Urban-chicken debate rages on

Brampton is the only municipality in the GTA that allows backyard fowl

If you ask Brampton resident Joe Arlotto the value of his backyard chickens, he shows you his wife's marbled sponge cake.

"Look at this," he says, pointing to the cake's golden hue. "That's from fresh eggs."

Last week, Arlotto — who currently has two chickens on his 1.7-acre property on Countryside Drive — asked city councillors to amend existing animal-control bylaws to let him keep more.

Brampton restricts domestic fowl to no more than two, but Arlotto wants an exemption from the bylaw to let him keep up to six. He says although his home is zoned residential, he has more than enough space to keep half a dozen chickens or more.

City staff will study Arlotto's request and make recommendations to councillors within a month. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Sheridan University?

ANDREW FRANCIS WALLACE/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ President of Sheridan College, Dr. Jeff Zabudsky

For the first time, one of the 24 community colleges created by former premier Bill Davis as a more hands-on alternative to the Ivory Tower wants to leave the club to become a university.

Frustrated by growing demand for its degree programs that Ontario graduate schools refuse to recognize — most are called "applied" degrees when offered by a college — Sheridan President Jeff Zabudsky said the school owes it to students to become the kind of institution that gives its grads the most options.

"So we're waving the white flag and saying 'okay, we might as well become part of the (university) club'" said Zabudsky. "We're being driven by student demand for degrees, but I want every graduate to be able to carry on to grad school if they choose. Currently they confront many barriers."

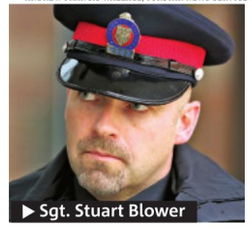
However some fear the move to a university could squeeze out the students for whom colleges were designed.

"We have to be sure we preserve the legacy of the colleges; we wouldn't want to marginalize programs that serve a different set of skills and trades," warned Professor Peter Dietsche of the University of Toronto, who holds the William Davis chair in community College Leadership.

Dietsche said colleges serve many of the groups so under-represented at university. Nine per cent of college students are aboriginal, nine to 12 per cent are disabled and college students reflect a broader range of income than those at university. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Officer testifies at inquest of killed teen

ANDREW FRANCIS WALLACE/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE



▶ Sgt. Stuart Blower

The second officer involved in the arrest of Junior Manon in May, 2010, is adamant that neither he nor his partner ever put the teen in a restraint position that could have caused his death. Sgt. Stuart Blower, who along with Const. Michael Adams, was involved in a violent struggle to arrest Manon when he died, testified Wednesday at a coroner's inquest that the 18-year-old was never chest down with the officers' weight on him.

The position is known to impair breathing and Blower testified the dangers of it are "hammered" in to them during police training.

"Categorically, at no time during the struggle was I on his back while he was face down," said Blower. The officer said he was behind Manon on the ground, both of them on their left sides. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

INDIAN SCANDAL

Ministers quit: Were all three watching porn?

Three government ministers in the southern Indian state of Karnataka resigned Wednesday.

But it wasn't because of a parliamentary vote or a matter of political principle.

They were accused of watching a pornographic video during an assembly session.

The right-wing Bharatiya Janata Party, which rules Karnataka, ordered the three ministers to resign after local TV channels aired footage of the men watching the allegedly pornographic clip while the state assembly proceedings were going on.

The ministers denied they were watching pornography.

But they said they were resigning to save their party from embarrassment.

Television footage showed Laxman Savadi, minister for co-operation, watching the video clip on his mobile phone and then passing the phone to C. C. Patil, minister for women and child development.

The mobile phone belonged to the minister for ports, Krishna Palemar, who also resigned.

Savadi said he was watching a video clip of a rave party to prepare for a discussion in the assembly.

Soon after TV stations aired the footage, outraged residents of Bangalore, the capital of Karnataka, held protests outside the homes of the ministers.

▶ China's newest heavyweight, Chun Chun, snoozes at a maternity hospital in Henan province.

Don't call him a little monster!

Chun Chun weighs in at 15.52 pounds ◐ Baby could set a China record

A mother in central China has given birth to a 15.52-pound baby.

The 29-year-old mother in Henan province gave birth to the boy in a cesarean operation, the state-run Tianjin Post said.

Delivery took just 20 minutes and both mother and the baby, named Chun Chun, are doing fine.

The paper said Chun Chun's parents are average size and there was nothing unusual about his mom's pregnancy or diet.

Guinness World Records says the heaviest newborn ever recorded was born to an Ohio woman in 1879 and weighed 23.7 pounds.

Chun Chun is possibly China's largest newborn on record since 1949.

Some census highlights

FRED CHARTRAND/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Familes keep shrinking. When Ryan and Ann Solomon got married, they knew they wanted to keep their family small. The Solomons' two-kid family is typical among their circle of friends in Ottawa. Indeed, couples with just one or two children have become the norm in Canada, part of a trend of steadily dwindling family size that has been going on since the early 1960s.

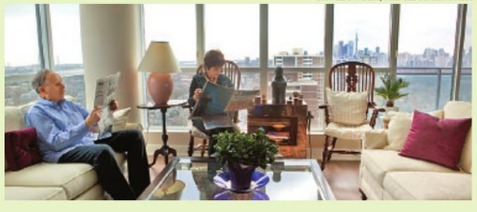
They're not alone, according to the 2011 census. On its current trajectory, the numbers suggest, Canada's growth rate could be almost entirely dependent on immigration within 50 years. THE CANADIAN PRESS

NATHAN DENETTE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ontario's exodus. When Ontario sputtered to an unceremonious stop in 2008 and 2009, a lot of people got out and walked — many westward, fresh census numbers suggest. Canada's manufacturing heartland posted the lowest growth rate since 1981-1986.

"There was no way we were going to be able to find something to afford our mortgage, plus pay the bills, in Ontario," said lifelong Ontario resident Pamela Wilson, 34, who now makes a home in the Alberta oilsands boom town of Fort McMurray. THE CANADIAN PRESS

PAWEL DWULIT/THE CANADIAN PRESS



Canada's condo boom. When Debrah and Joel Weiss first moved to Toronto, they wanted nothing more than a proper house with a sprawling yard and lush garden. Four decades later, the retired couple is part of the condo craze that is reshaping Canada's urban lifestyle.

Experts say fundamental shifts in population and lifestyle — couples putting off marriage and children, workers rebelling against tiresome, traffic-clogged commutes — are pairing with a growing backlash against urban sprawl to spur one of the most pronounced and sustained real-estate booms in recent history. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Westward is where Canada

Canadians ride West but don't turn into cowboys ‘We are becoming more cosmopolitan, not really frontier anymore’: Newcomers centre director

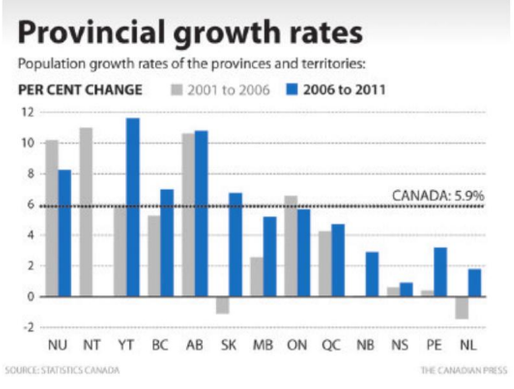
Jay Palter's impression of life in Alberta was typical for a lifelong Toronto resident: Wheat fields, oil derricks and dusty cowboys riding off into the sunset.

After three years of living in Edmonton, it feels more like riding towards a new dawn.

Nearly three years after saddling up his family and steering them across the country to Alberta's capital city, the 47-year-old social media strategist feels humbled and delighted by his decision to move to a place he happily calls diverse, multicultural — and home.

"In a way," Palter said, "being a westerner feels kind of like optimism about the future."

The sun is indeed rising on the West. Census numbers released Wednesday by Statistics Canada show that for the first time, more people live west of Ontario — in B.C., Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba — than east of it, in Quebec and Atlantic Canada.



The numbers tell the story.

Alberta's ranks expanded at a rate of 10.8 per cent between 2006 and 2011, the highest of all the provinces and nearly twice the national average of 5.9 per cent. In Calgary, the growth rate was 12.6 per cent; in Edmonton, it was 12.1 per cent.

Growth in Manitoba doubled to 5.2 per cent, thanks largely to an influx of more than 64,000 immigrants, twice the number who arrived during the previous five-year census period.

"The centre of gravity is shifting," said Harry Hiller, a sociology professor at the University of Calgary, whose 2009 book, Second Promised Land, documents how migration to Alberta, fuelled in large measure by the bustling oil and gas industry, has transformed Canadian society.

Not surprisingly, the resulting shift in economic power has been a boon for the region's confidence, Hiller said. And when the relationship is a win-win for the region and its residents, the place can change a person in ways as subtle as an allegiance to a sports team or as profound as their personal politics.

"They really buy into the Alberta ideology," he said, "because they see how it's benefiting them."

The West's growing cultural influence in Canada is as apparent as the nearest television screen.

Corner Gas, Brent Butt's smash small-town Saskatchewan sitcom, is widely regarded as one of the most popular Canadian TV shows of all time. The show proved Canadians were thirsty for stories set in the West, said executive producer Virginia Thompson. THE CANADIAN PRESS

POLITICAL, ECONOMIC FOCUS SHIFTS WEST

The plane zipping Prime Minister Stephen Harper westward this week with a gaggle of journalists and corporate executives could be seen as a sort of metaphor for Canada's new demographic — and political — reality.

On his way to China, Harper flew over his own political heartland, the region that makes trade with Asia his government's new imperative.

The latest census results show that for the first time, more Canadians now live west of Ontario than east of the province — 30.7 per cent compared to 30.6 per cent. Yukon had the biggest growth spurt at 11.6 per cent between 2006 and 2011, followed by Alberta at 10.8 per cent, nearly double the national average.

Investment deal signed on first full day of Harper's three-city tour

The conclusion of 18 years of talks with China for an investment protection deal marks a historic step forward in Canada-China relations, the prime minister said Wednesday.

At the end of his first full day in China, Stephen Harper held up the foreign investment promotion and protection deal as the result of legwork to repair a bruised relationship between the two countries.

"My sense is the willingness of the Chinese to conclude this agreement indicates to me that they do put increasing strategic importance on two-way investment between our countries," he told reporters.

A foreign investment promotion and protection deal, or FIPA, gives foreign investors assurances they'll be treated the same as domestic companies and allows for arbitration at an international tribunal-type body in disputes. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Van driver at fault in crash: Police

A van carrying 13 poultry farm workers from South America drove right through a stop sign and into the path of a freightliner truck, police said Wednesday, citing driver error as the cause of one of Ontario's deadliest collisions.

Ten workers from the van and the truck driver died Monday after the violent impact in Hampstead, Ont., sent the van hurtling across a lawn, trapping the dead and dying workers inside the wreckage. All of the workers — except one man originally from Nicaragua — were Peruvian.

The van driver, David Armando Hernandez Blancas, 45, was one of the workers killed in the crash and had been in Ontario for some time, living in New Hamburg (not far from the crash site). He had an Ontario driver's licence, but not the type required to drive a van of that size, investigators said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Daredevil set to break speed of sound from the edge of space

- Skydiver wants not only to set new records but to help space exploration
- Trains with scientists, medical specialists, record-breaking freefaller

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ Felix Baumgartner is expected to travel at up to 1,190 km/h when he free falls to Earth from more than 35,000 metres. His other death-defying feats include jumping off the Petronas Towers in Malaysia, base jumping — or parachuting from low altitudes — off the right arm of the statue of Christ the Redeemer in Rio de Janeiro and, in 2003, becoming the first man to skydive across the English Channel using carbon wings.

Later this year Austrian skydiver Felix Baumgartner will attempt to break four world records, including being the first person to break the speed of sound during a freefall.

Baumgartner will ascend to at least 36,576 metres in a special pressurized capsule that will use a 140-metre helium balloon to lift it to the edge of space.

Then, Baumgartner — wearing a special space suit similar to those worn by NASA astronauts — will step out of the capsule and free fall safely to Earth, breaking the speed of sound after about 35 seconds. He is expected to travel 1,190 km/h.

If all goes well, Baumgartner hopes he will also break three other world records that have remained unbroken for about 50 years, including the highest manned balloon flight, the highest skydive and the longest freefall.

But if something happens to the suit, Baumgartner could find himself in trouble: one puncture could mean instant death. The air pressure is so thin that without oxygen he would suffocate. His blood would boil because the boiling point of liquids fall as pressure falls.

At those altitudes, the temperatures are frigid — as low as -70 C. At 3,048 metres a pilot without an air tank suffers hypoxia. With little oxygen going to the brain, he or she can begin to speak nonsense.

At 15,240 metres any gases trapped in the body expand to more than eight times their volume. Intestines swell, lung tissue ruptures; the abdomen distends, making it difficult to breathe.

"No-one really knows what that will be like. The fact is you have a lot of different airflows coming around your body.... What kind of reaction that creates, I can't tell you."
SKYDIVER FELIX BAUMGARTNER

The special suit, the pressurized capsule and the safety protocols have been five years in the making.

Attached to the suit is a specially adapted parachute that allows him to reach the rip cord to open the parachute while inside the suit. The helmet of his suit has also been specially designed to protect him from the sonic boom as he passes through the sound barrier.

After five minutes of free fall, Baumgartner plans to open his parachute and eventually land safely on Earth. But if he goes into an uncontrolled spin, it could cause him to black out, making it unlikely that he would survive.

The project, known as Red Bull Stratos, is not just about record breaking, Baumgartner asserts. The team says that the freefall will also help with future space flight, developing safer equipment for professionals as well as potential space tourists.

China bashing may aggravate region: Minister

JEWEL SAMAD/GETTY IMAGES

"Americans should not underestimate the extent to which such rhetoric can spark reactions that create a new and unintended reality in the region."
FOREIGN MINISTER K. SHANMUGAM

Singapore has warned U.S politicians not to bash China during the election campaign.

Foreign Minister K. Shanmugam told a Washington think-tank on Tuesday that anti-China rhetoric could spark reactions that affect the wider Asia-Pacific region.

Both Democratic and Republican lawmakers and Republican presidential contenders have taken aim at China, accusing it of discriminatory policies that cost Americans their jobs. Lawmakers also have voiced misgivings about China's military buildup.

"Domestic pressures in the U.S. and the demands of elections have resulted in some anti-China rhetoric in domestic debates. We in Singapore understand that this is electioneering," Shanmugam told a conference at the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

The Chinese and U.S. governments have deepened ties in the past year and have a mutual interest in stability. Still, uncertainty remains about the future of the relationship, particularly the emerging rivalry between their militaries, the world's two largest.

On both sides of the aisle in the U.S. Congress, there has been a drumbeat of criticism against Beijing, and an inconclusive legislative push to punish China for undervaluing its currency, thereby hurting American trade.

Republican presidential front-runner Mitt Romney has promised to cite Beijing as a currency manipulator on his first day in office should he win the November election. It is a step the Obama administration and the Republican Bush administration before it have resisted.

Some of the China-bashing has drawn strong criticism in the U.S.

Yemen crackdown killed hundreds: Rights group

Report claims at least 270 people slain by security forces during Arab Spring on direct orders of president

Yemen's president, who is in New York protected by diplomatic immunity while he receives medical treatment, ordered a crackdown on Arab Spring protesters last year that killed at least 120 people in just one city, Human Rights Watch said in a new report Wednesday.

The report, based on interviews with more than 170 experts and witnesses, provides more detail than the sketchy reports of deaths that trickled out of Yemen last year.

People in Yemen have been protesting President Ali Abdullah Saleh's 33-year dictatorship as part of the broader anti-authoritarian wave that swept the Middle East and North Africa last year.

"I saw with my own eyes a man with a loudspeaker calling on the security forces to stop attacking and killing their brothers. He was shot dead with a bullet." PROTESTER ARIF ABD AL-SALAM

Yemen's second-largest city, Taiz, became a hotbed of protest. Saleh's forces beat and shot demonstrators, shelled neighbourhoods, bulldozed a crowded public square and stormed into hospitals, evicting patients and attacking medical staff, the New York-based Human Rights Watch said.

"They had tanks and bulldozers. They were throwing petrol bombs into the tents and firing from many directions," the new report quoted protester Arif Abd al-Salam as saying.

Human Rights Watch said its interviews confirmed 120 killings in Taiz alone, with 57 people killed in attacks on rallies and 63 killed in shellings and other attacks on opposition tribal fighters. It said it counted at least 270 deaths nationwide in Yemen last year but said the true total might be far higher.

Saleh has blamed the violence in Yemen on terrorists. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Yemenis chant slogans in support of outgoing President Ali Abdullah Saleh on Wednesday outside the U.S. embassy in Sanaa, the capital. They claim Saleh was attacked in New York, where he has been since late January receiving medical treatment for injuries from a bomb blast in June.

Revoke Saleh's immunity: Activists

An election in Yemen on Feb. 21 will select President Saleh's successor. As a head of state, he has diplomatic immunity until then.

While Saleh has been an anti-terrorism ally of Washington, the United States has not officially welcomed him. President Barack Obama's administration allowed him in only after internal debate about whether his exile would help advance democracy in Yemen.

Human Rights Watch called on Washington, Europe and the Gulf states to encourage Yemen's caretaker government to revoke Saleh's immunity in his own country.

"No one responsible for grave international crimes should get a free pass," a spokesman said.

No pension crisis: Report

Finance Minister calls budget watchdog's analysis 'unbelievable'

Canada is not facing a crisis over public pensions, the country's budget watchdog concludes in a report that appears to undermine the Harper government's claim that the system is unsustainable.

The analysis from Parliamentary Budget Officer Kevin Page set off a storm in the Commons on Wednesday, with opposition parties accusing government ministers of fear-mongering and waging a war on poor seniors.

Page said the government may have other reasons for making changes, but inability to pay for the benefits is not an issue either in the short term or long term.

Released Wednesday, the new report from the PBO suggests that the debate over Old Age Security reform should be about priorities, not necessity as the Conservatives have so far framed it. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dell launches new VOIP mobile app

Canadians frustrated with astronomical mobile service bills now have a free alternative in a new app being offered by Dell.

The company has partnered with Fongo to launch Dell Voice, a voice-over-Internet-protocol product that allows free calling almost anywhere within Canada over a WiFi or mobile data connection, rather than eating into a user's allotment of mobile minutes. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Free phoning

- Users get their own free phone number to accept incoming calls and the service also includes free voice mail, caller ID and call waiting.
- The only catch is that users will be exposed to ads while using the app.

Airlines adopt all-in pricing

Two of Canada's biggest airlines are launching new all-inclusive pricing that makes it easier to determine how much you are actually paying to fly.

Both Air Canada and Porter unveiled plans to make advertised prices look more like final cost of a ticket by combining the extra charges that have been left out in the past. THE CANADIAN PRESS

ONLINE DATING FOR DUMMIES

HE SAYS ...

JOHN MAZEROLLE
METRO

The journal Psychological Science in the Public Interest has released a study of Internet dating with results that I think will be astonishing to anyone who lives in a cave at the bottom of the sea without Wi-Fi.

We media types went all first-love-breathless over the story anyway because it's rare we get to publish a science story people will click on that doesn't involve the words "primate sex."

However, if your IQ is larger than your birth weight and your technological savviness allows you to successfully use Lite-Brite, then you are likely to respond to everything in this dating study with an emphatic, "Well, duh."

"About a quarter of people met their partners over the Internet. In an online world where one of the most popular activities for years has been adorning cat photos with grammatically incorrect captions, I have a hard time seeing an online conversation as unusual."

Well, duh #1: Internet dating is popular.

About a quarter of people met their partners over the Internet. In an online world where one of the most popular activities for years has been adorning cat photos with grammatically incorrect captions, I have a hard time seeing an online conversation as unusual.

Well, duh #2: Men initiate more than women, and both sexes use an unhelpful "shopping" mentality that highlights looks and interests.

Some people cited this as proof that online dating is inferior. Some people have never dated offline, I guess.

Well, duh #3: Sites that claim to be able to match you based on chemistry are eBaloney.

But the smarmy old man seems so trustworthy! And all those happy couples standing in white rooms!

I do use a dating site with a matching algorithm, but it's not hard to tell a poor match. For instance, I avoid self-anthropologists who catalogue every instance of themselves looking into a bathroom mirror. I'm intimidated by that level of dedication.

Well, duh #4: It's better to meet in person than chat endlessly online.

OK, one thing did surprise me.

The researchers said meeting in person was better than meeting online, and I thought, "Well, you can do both."

But then I saw that the average e-dater spends 12 hours a week online looking for a mate. Here's where, "Well, duh" gives way to "WTF!" (That's a research term meaning Weighty Transformational Fact.)

That much time online seems particularly tentative in an era where a "date" is a cup of coffee, or, if you're jumping in with both feet, a walk.

Gosh, after 12 hours, you could have 23 hilarious rejection stories and one glorious success.

No matter where you meet it's important to get out there, meet face to face and ignore the nitpicking that might be keeping you from noticing the love of your life! Unless they don't know the proper usage of your and you're. In which case they're useless.

Well, duh.

The Great Whale of London

'Whale' points to species' woes

LONDON. There she blows! An 11-metre "whale" floated down the Thames Wednesday to highlight the plight faced by the western gray, one of the world's most endangered whales. Numbering 130 strong with only 26 breeding females left, this whale species is "teetering on the edge of extinction," WWF says. MWN

"We're calling on the banks to take action and oppose the plans."

COLIN BUTFIELD
WWF'S HEAD OF CAMPAIGNS

THE WHALE WAS TOWED DOWN TO CANARY WHARF, ONE OF LONDON'S FINANCIAL CENTRES, TO CHAMPION WWF'S CALL ON EUROPE'S BIG PROJECT LENDERS, INCLUDING BNP PARIBAS AND CREDIT SUISSE, TO OPPOSE PLANS TO BUILD A THIRD RIG.

Oil rigs threaten whales' status

PETROLEUM. The campaign group claims oil and gas drilling threatens the western gray's main feeding ground. Two oil rigs exist near the whales' refuge off the coast of Sakhalin Island in the Russian Far East. Plans for a third rig were not included in the plan's original environmental assessment, WWF says. MWN

Remembering the real whale

HISTORY. It's been six years since Londoners were enthralled by the sight of a real whale in the Thames. The northern bottlenose swam upstream after apparently losing her way. Medics' rescue attempts were followed by millions worldwide, not least by the thousands who flocked to the banks of the Thames to watch. MWN

How tokens make change

Students busk for Youth Without Shelter Friday ◐ Last year's event raised over $30,000

BACKSTAGE PASS

IAN GORMELY
METRO TORONTO

People like to accuse Gen Y of suffering from bouts of extreme narcissism. But this Friday, a group of young artistic and community minded Torontonians will put that notion to the test. Along with the normal crowds, Friday commuters will find more than 400 high school students crowding 25 of the city's subway platforms, busking to raise money for Youth Without Shelter as part of Tokens for Change.

Besides receiving course credit for their participation, students like 15-year-old Greenwood College student Micah Laskin, who also participated last year, says it's important to support your peers.

"I'm a youth myself," he says. "Our class is very community service centred."

Laskin's classmate Sasha Goldin Laskin's also participated in last year's token drive and helps with a weekly lunch program also associated with the shelter.

"It might be mandatory," she says, "but Greenwood teaches selflessness."

Located in Etobicoke, Youth Without Shelter opened its doors in 1986. Today it operates as both a referral agency and emergency shelter for youth 16 to 24.

The money the kids raise goes to buy TTC tokens. Last year's inaugural event raised more than $30,000 — or 10,000 tokens. Youth Without Shelter then uses these to help transport people to school, work or job interviews.

Greenwood's grade 11 drama class will be performing improv sketches centred around homeless youth stereotypes. Often these kids are assumed to be the problem when in reality a number of mitigating factors, like unsupportive families lead to their homelessness.

"They hope to get a job or a good education," he says.

Beyond helping the shelter, Goldin hopes that events like Tokens for Change raises the profile of youth homelessness in the city. "It's important that people realize the importance of helping the homeless youth," she says. "It puts life in perspective."

Tokens For Change takes place Friday, Feb 11. TTC at subway stations citywide.

Azealia Banks, the Harlem rapper with a sweet smile and filthy mouth, has everyone talking At just 20 years old, her fame is on the upswing

PAT HEALY
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN NEW YORK

Azealia Banks was excited to learn that Karl Lagerfeld is a fan of hers and hand-picked her for a recent project.

"I was telling Kanye (West) about it, and Kanye was like, 'Wow, that's pretty legit,'" she says.

Banks, 20, speaks at the same rapid pace as she raps — her rat-a-tat delivery has resulted in two million-plus views of her YouTube hit video 212. The Harlem, New York, native says she can feel the momentum of her increasing fame, but is very conscious to keep it in perspective. "People are starting to recognize me, but it's not quite surreal yet," she says.

"I don't feel like I've had that moment where thousands of people are screaming back at me."

That moment is all but guaranteed, as earlier this year she was the first artist announced to perform at the Coachella festival in April.

"It's about to get crazy," she laughs nervously.

The "s—" she must top

When 212 hit YouTube this past September, word quickly spread of the gritty black and white video and the sexy girl in pigtails with the huge smile who spits raunchy lyrics (unprintable here).

She's currently working on her full-length debut, which she hopes to have out by May.

"Some of the songs are there, but I don't have enough heat, especially with how quickly 212 caught on and blew up," she says.

"That's the s— I have to top. I have to compete with myself now."

What sets Banks apart from most other MCs is the wide range of styles she has already demonstrated.

Sure, other hip-hop artists may sample some indie rock from time to time, but is there anybody else working within the genre that would cover an Interpol song? Or bust out Prodigy's Firestarter, as she did at a recent London gig?

"It's just that I like what I like."

The 411 on 212

When 212 hit the web, it quickly racked up millions of hits, with many viewers speculating about the identity of the subject of the song, who Banks viciously says she is going to "ruin." The most popular theory is that the threat was directed at Nicki Minaj, who attended the same high school as Banks several years before. Banks says the lyric concerns a different LaGuardia High School alum. "It's about me," she says. "There was just a lot of s— that was going on."

Battling darkness

Hair-metal revival band gets its act together and embarks on first North American tour in eight years

LINDA LABAN

METRO WORLD NEWS IN BOSTON

It might not be the most famous of Brit rock brotherly disharmonies, but the Darkness' singer Justin Hawkins and his guitarist brother Dan have had their fair share of sibling incivility. The brothers' lack of good communication was certainly one cause for such a long hiatus for the hair-metal revival band.

"There's a lot of stuff that we were getting bogged down in, and that was just not worth it, you know," Justin says via phone just after completing a sold-out autumn tour in the U.K.

"The whole 'life's too short' thing is a good lesson, really," he says.

A 13-date North American tour — the band's first trek to the U.S. in eight years — kicked off in Toronto earlier this month.

So far, after reuniting for Britain's Download Festival last June, it has been a triumphant return.

But it was triumph that factored into the band's original problems. After exploding in 2003 with their big hit, a catchy pop metal piece called I Believe In A Thing Called Love, things went haywire. Reports of Justin's overindulgence in rock 'n' roll's mythical pleasures were rife, but the falsetto-ing frontman says it's the simple life for him from now on. "When you have a simple existence and it's just about music, then you do great work. And I'm sure that's the same for everybody," he says.

"The minute you start trying to balance other factors, it just becomes unmanageable."

Ambitious 'collapse'

Justin Hawkins has put aside his hiatus side projects British Whale and Hot Leg, but says he'd like to write a musical soon.

"Not like a musical of our songs, but actually [one with] a storyline. I started to work on one that was called The Collapse Of The Lowestoft Fishing Industry," he says, referring to the band's hometown, a once lucrative fishing port."

A wandering path

Washington has made some bold career choices

IN FOCUS

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

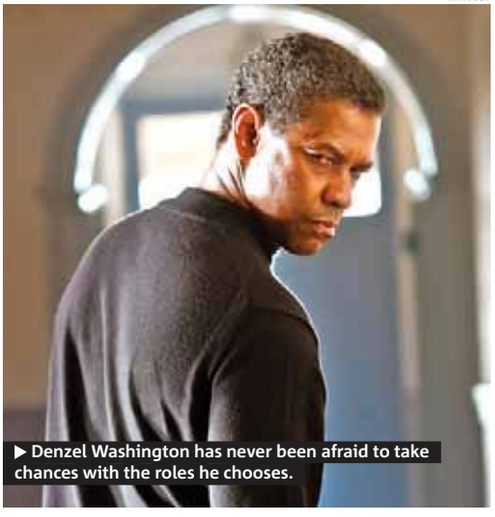
Denzel Washington is a famous guy. Since his 1974 film debut — he played the uncredited part of Alleyway mugger in Death Wish — he's won two Academy Awards and a Tony, directed two films and been voted one of the most handsome people in the world.

This weekend, he teams with Ryan Reynolds in what will certainly be the handsomest film of the month, Safe House. The story of a young CIA agent guarding a fugitive turns ugly when their safe house is attacked, is bound to break the box office, but not all of Denzel's movies have been huge hits.

Though he's had great success with films like Training Day, let's have a look at some of his overlooked films.

The 1991 crime-thriller Ricochet starred Washington as a Los Angeles cop-turned-attorney going head-to-head with a bitter escaped criminal (John Lithgow) he put behind bars. Solid action and a great villain from Lithgow's psycho period — before he did 3rd Rock from the Sun and went soft — it never found the audience it deserved.

HANDOUT



▶ Denzel Washington has never been afraid to take chances with the roles he chooses.

Years later in Training Day, Washington's character flashes a picture of himself as a young LAPD officer. The photo is a still from Ricochet.

Washington has played his share of attorneys and policemen over the years, but he has never been afraid to try new things, as he did in 1993's Much Ado About Nothing. In this all-star adaptation of Shakespeare's most famous romantic comedy, he plays the powerful Don Pedro of Aragon.

The movie took hits for its miscasting of Keanu Reeves and Michael Keaton in key roles, but Washington was praised for his work. He has performed Richard III and Julius Caesar on stage, but this movie remains his only filmed Shakespearean role.

From the light comedy of the 17th century we next look at the post-apocalyptic The Book of Eli, set just a few years from today. It's a strange movie. Denzel plays a coiled spring of righteous power in this timely movie about how religion can be used for both good and evil.

Finally, a movie that should have spawned an ongoing franchise but dried up after just one film was Devil in a Blue Dress. Rolling Stone called Washington's take on private investigator Ezekiel 'Easy' Rawlins a "richly detailed portrayal," adding that you leave the movie hoping the other books in the Rawlins series will be turned into films. Sadly, that didn't happen.

The hunger for something more

Josh Hutcherson will face a daunting few months

But with two major films, he longs for indie work

NED EHRBAR
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LOS ANGELES

While he spent most of his teenage years churning out major motion pictures, 19-year-old Josh Hutcherson is keenly aware that as far as fame goes, he hasn't seen anything yet. This year, he co-headlines Journey 2: the Mysterious Island with Dwayne Johnson — who's stepping in for Journey to the Center of the Earth co-star Brendan Frasier. And then Hutcherson has a little something called the Hunger Games hitting theaters next month. Hutcherson describes the coming months as "a little daunting."

Your character seems to have bad luck with father figures.

Yeah, a bit. He's having a hard time dealing with that, and I think that because his father wasn't around originally he has a tough time kind of coping with the new guy that's sort of come into his life.

How was having Dwayne Johnson stepping in to replace Brendan Frasier?

I think with Dwayne, you see him be the big action guy and then also the charming Tooth Fairy kind of role, and then this one I think kind of combines those two worlds.

Is a third film in the franchise in your mind at all? Has there been talk or contracts for that yet?

For sure. They've had a lot of talks about it. They're kind of waiting obviously to see how this movie performs and whatnot.

Has there been a focus or effort by yourself or your team to find more franchise-type films?

No, not so much. I think if anything it's been a bit of the opposite — now that I have the Hunger Games and Journey franchises, to move on to something that more of an indie kind of film.

With the Hunger Games coming up, this is a big year ahead for you as well. How are things changing for you?

At the moment, it hasn't changed that much. But as far as how I'm looking ahead, I'm a little bit nervous, just based on what the expectations are for the movie. It's going to be a little life-changing, possibly, but I'm on board. I'm excited about it.

The casting process for "the Hunger Games" was one of the most contested, heated online discussions I've ever seen. How was it to be on the actors' side of that?

The fans are extremely loyal, and any time you see them lashing out or whatever you want to call it, it's coming from a place of passion. I personally didn't look at anything like that. I never really went online. I'd only heard through hearsay what other people were talking about, really.

Look at him now

Breezy's skills as a rapper have put him alongside some big-name MCs

PETER KRAMER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Chris Brown's Look at Me Now is nominated for best rap song and best rap performance at the Grammy Awards

Chris Brown is known as a pop singer, a slick bedroom crooner and at other times, a Euro-flavoured dance singer. But it's his rapping that has taken his career to new heights.

With his hit single Look at Me Now, Brown has dominated more than just the R&B territory: The boastful track, which co-stars Lil Wayne and Busta Rhymes, was Billboard's No. 1 rap song of 2011 and it's nominated for best rap song and best rap performance at Sunday's Grammy Awards, where Brown's competition includes Jay-Z, Kanye West, Dr. Dre and Eminem.

The song is just another example of Brown's rapping prowess. At last year's BET Hip-Hop Awards, Brown went toe-to-toe with other hip-hop acts during one segment, and was so strong he left 50 Cent wowed.

"Chris particularly was impressive," said 50 Cent. "He rapped better than the rappers. I'm going to give it up. I'm watching the show (like), 'How did they let that happen?'"

50 Cent is not the only member of the hip-hop community impressed by Brown: "(Chris) did a mixtape that really blew my mind and I didn't know that was him rhyming," said Questlove of The Roots.

Brown's Look at Me Now spent eight and 10 weeks at the top spot on Billboard's R&B/Hip-Hop and Rap songs charts, respectively. Mark Pitts, the president of urban music at RCA Music Group who signed Brown to Sony at age 16, said he initially didn't want to see the singer rapping.

Return to scene of the crime

- Chris Brown will perform at this year's Grammy Awards, the event where his career almost ended three years ago.
- Brown assaulted then-girlfriend Rihanna at a pre-Grammy party in 2009 and is serving five years of probation for the felony attack.
- A source told The Associated Press on Monday that Brown will hit the stage at Sunday's show. The source spoke on condition of anonymity because Brown's performance has not been officially announced.
- Rihanna will also perform at the show. She's up for four awards.

"It took me a minute to really appreciate (Look at Me Now). I didn't want to like it because I didn't want him rapping," Pitts said.

Rapping is a departure for 22-year-old Brown, who debuted on the scene in 2005 as an R&B-pop heartthrob. Pitts said that past Brown songs where a rapper is featured most likely had a rap verse from Brown first, but they were never used. Pitts, who has overseen the careers of the Notorious B.I.G., Diddy and Usher, says he once thought singers and rappers should stay in their own lanes.

But Brown helped change his perception.

"It's a different age now," Pitts said.

"I'm not surprised by anything from (Chris) anymore. He's not in one category. It works for him, and not everybody can do that."

Brown's CD where Look at Me Now appears — F.A.M.E. (Forgiving All My Enemies) — is nominated for best R&B album at the Grammys; his upcoming fifth disc, Fortune, will most likely feature rapping, Pitts said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lagerfeld addresses Adele fury

Designer made waves when he was quoted as calling singer 'a little bit fat'

Karl Lagerfeld

Karl Lagerfeld has responded to the frenzy surrounding his recent comments about British singer Adele's weight — exclusively to Metro International.

Lagerfeld, who served as the global guest editor of this newspaper on Tuesday, told us: "I'd like to say to Adele that I am your biggest admirer. Sometimes when you take a sentence out of the article it changes the meaning of the thought. What I said was in relation to Lana Del Rey and the sentence has since been taken out of context from how it was originally published.

"I actually prefer Adele, she is my favourite singer and I am a great admirer of her. I lost over 30 kilos over 10 years ago and have kept it off. I know how it feels when the press is mean to you in regards to your appearance. Adele is a beautiful girl. She is the best. And I can't wait for her next CD."

Lagerfeld was quoted as calling the singer "a little bit fat" in response to a question about singer Lana Del Rey.

The controversial statement made headlines worldwide.

So George isn't perfect after all

George Clooney does not consider himself dad material, based on his past experiences with children — both at work and at home.

"I've played a parent quite a few times and I worked with a lot of kids on ER," Clooney said at an Oscar nominees luncheon.

"A lot of the child actors had over-moussed hair, and one little s— wouldn't even rehearse with me."

And then there was the time he tried to entertain some friends' kids at his house with a classic film: "I love the 1962 drama To Kill A Mockingbird, and I put it on in my screening room for them, but all the children began complaining it was in black and white and would be boring. So I said to them, 'Shut the f— up!' That's why I shouldn't be a parent."

Brand keeps it classy?

An attorney for Russell Brand reportedly filed finalized divorce papers in Los Angeles this week, according to TMZ.

And although Brand and Katy Perry reportedly did not sign a prenuptial agreement — meaning Brand could easily go after half of the fortune Perry earned during their 14-month marriage — sources say the British comedian has no intention of going after her money.

"This divorce is as amicable as it gets," one source tells the website. According to Forbes magazine, Perry earned $44 million between May 2010 and May 2011.

Simon says Beyoncé, Mariah not considered for X Factor

Simon Cowell is taking on some of the blame for the perceived lacklustre performance of the American X Factor, claiming his natural boastfulness worked against him.

"It's only because I opened my big mouth and said we were going to get 20 million (viewers). If I hadn't said that, everybody would be saying the show was a huge success," Cowell says, according to Hollyscoop.

As for replacing excused judges Paula Abdul and Nicole Scherzinger, Cowell shoots down rumours about new moms Beyoncé and Mariah Carey being considered and explains that Madonna would be "expensive" — but Katy Perry would be "fun" and "feisty."

Gentlemen, the time to drop trou is now

What's under the pants is in the spotlight • Men's undergarments are entering a new era

Some items in the fashion world are simply desires, and some are necessities. Where do men's undergarments fall? Increasingly, right in the middle.

There's a guaranteed market that needs to replenish supplies no matter what's happening in the economy. But innovation in style and technology has made boxers, briefs and undershirts, once an afterthought into a buzz-worthy category of men's clothes, to the forefront.

So much so that H&M debuted ads for its new undergarment collection by David Beckham during the Super Bowl and Jockey wasted no time signing football star Tim Tebow as its new spokesman.

It makes sense as a growth category, says Marshal Cohen, chief industry analyst with market research firm The NPD Group, but it took the right conditions to get on the fashion industry's radar: streamlined design, comfortable stretch fabrics, the idea that dressing starts at the base layer and that shabby-chic doesn't cut it anymore.

ARMANI EXCHANGE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ A/X Armani Exchange's seamless style briefs.

Men, in general, aren't as interested in fleeting trends, he adds. They are, however, willing to buy an "evolved" product if they need to replace an old one. And, Cohen says, as has happened with smartphones and athletic apparel, sometimes men will trade up if they think there's genuine newness.

H&M must see the potential. The collaboration with Beckham launches with not only boxers, briefs and Ts, but also vests, pyjamas and long johns. Beckham said in a statement that it took him and his design team 18 months to come up with just the right initial styles.

"It all starts with underwear and you build your wardrobe from there," agrees Patrick Doddy, senior vice-president and brand director of A/X Armani Exchange. "It's the foundation to your style."

A/X's core, younger consumer isn't self-conscious about purchasing undergarments in the middle of a bustling store, he says. This fashion-savvy customer knows, just like his girlfriend or wife does, that flattering, stylish underwear only enhances his overall look.

"Men have recognized they can't do shabby-chic and look like they just rolled out of bed."

Rough stuff

Skin maintenance may sound a tad tedious for some men. Here we offer easy tips to make keeping moisturized easier this frosty season.

Make it easily accessible
Keep moisturizer in your gym bag, or even your car and use it often. By having it close at hand you won't be tempted to skip this crucial step to keeping skin feeling healthy, and may even inspire your friends to keep their skin resilient and flexible as well.

Focus on specific areas
Don't worry about moisturizing your entire body. If you are in a hurry, just make sure to target key areas such as your hands, face, elbows and knees. These areas tend to be drier than the rest of your body and may need some extra attention.

Main dishes such as Shrimp Fettuccine with Fresh Basil Pesto and Zucchini, and Grilled Trout with Fresh Dill and Chives, and Indonesian-Style Chicken with Savoury Peanut Sauce come with lots of great ideas for healthy side dishes.

Every recipe has a handy nutrient analysis and each has been carefully tested to ensure the results will be healthy as well as delicious.

Perfect for just the two of us

Rocco DiSpirito offers an alternative to typical Valentine's Day fare with this Surf & Turf Cobbler ▶ This dish is specifically designed to serve two people, making it perfect for couples

This recipe is Rocco Disprito's version of a trendy dish served in restaurants across North America — lobster pot pie.

A typical pot pie like this will cost you around 680 calories and 46 grams of fat per serving.

But the chef has downsized that to just 330 calories and six grams of fat.

Preparation:

1. In a large stockpot, bring 6 l (24 cups) of water to a boil. Set a bowl of ice water nearby. Submerge lobster in boiling water, then return water to a boil. Cook lobster for 4 minutes, adding asparagus to water for last 2 minutes. Use a slotted spoon to transfer asparagus to ice water to cool for 2 minutes, then transfer to a kitchen towel to dry. Remove lobster from water and place on a sheet pan. Let cool until easy to handle.

2. Heat a medium nonstick skillet over high. Season beef with salt and pepper, then spritz pan with cooking spray and add beef to pan. Cook for 1 to 2 minutes or until outsides are well browned and centres are rare, turning once. Transfer beef to a plate and set aside.

3. Drain beets, reserving 50 ml (1/4 cup) of the liquid. Cut two-thirds of the drained beets (about 250 ml/1 cup) into bite-size pieces (save remaining beets for another use). Add half of the beet pieces to a blender along with the 50 ml (1/4 cup) of reserved liquid. Cover and blend until smooth.

4. Add 16 pumps of butter spray and cover and blend again just until combined. Pour pureed beets into a medium bowl and add remaining chopped beets. Add asparagus to beet mixture along with cooked beef cubes and fresh tarragon.

5. Heat oven to 200 C (400 F). Remove meat from lobster and cut into bite-size pieces. Add to beet mix and stir until well combined. Season with salt and pepper. Spoon mixture evenly into a 1-l (4-cup) oven-safe glass bowl.

MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

6. In a medium bowl, mix pancake mix and water. Drop dough into 6 small mounds over lobster mixture. Bake for 15 minutes or until top is browned and filling is heated through. Remove and top with horseradish.

Ingredients:

- 625-g (1 1/4-lb) live lobster
- 125 g (4 oz) fresh asparagus spears (12 to 16 spears, depending on thickness), trimmed and cut into 2.5-cm (1-inch) pieces
- 90 g (3 oz) beef tenderloin, cut into 8 cubes
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 1 can (398 ml/14 oz) red beets with liquid
- 16 pumps butter spray
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) chopped fresh tarragon
- 150 ml (2/3 cup) heart-smart pancake and baking mix (such as Bisquick)
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) water
- 10 ml (2 tsp) prepared horseradish

North York takes it up a notch

The project overview

Parkside at Atria is the second phase in a master planned community of four residential towers continuing upon the huge success of Alto at Atria. Overlooking the flora and fauna of the adjacent green parklands, Parkside at Atria is accessed from a tree-lined street culminating in a private courtyard.

AN EYE-CATCHING EXHIBIT

ROOFTOP SURFING

PAUL GOLINI JR.
HOME
@METRONEWS.CA

After the morning rush on Monday, I drove down to Brookfield Place, where curators were putting the final touches on the Migrating Landscapes exhibit.

The name might be ringing a bell for you because I wrote about the nation-wide architecture and design competition when I first heard about it.

Since then, it has been making its way across Canada and the Ontario regional exhibition opened to the public here in Toronto on Feb. 6, so I went downtown to take a look. Just so you know, you can go down too, and see it for free until Feb. 24.

Now for those of you that know Brookfield Place, you're familiar with the beautiful atrium space that is often a backdrop to high-profile exhibitions and events.

When I was there, the sun was streaming in through the Allen Lambert Galleria, which at that hour would typically be a thoroughfare for businesspeople in the area.

I watched as some of them slowed down to have a look at the wooden landscape that had been constructed across much of the floor over the weekend.

Within the wooden landscape, the entries for the regional competition are displayed. Each one is a young architect or designer's interpretation of a dwelling based on their cultural memories.

At the close of the exhibition some of them will represent Canada at the world-renowned Venice Architecture Biennale (a.k.a. the Olympics of Architecture).

BILD is a proud supporter and strategic partner with Migrating Landscapes because our members create and build well-designed and well-planned communities across the GTA every day.

There is an art to city building and this exhibit speaks to the creative side of the business, where design and architecture capture the imagination and emotion of future residents.

I encourage you to go down and see the exhibit over the next few weeks and I'll leave you with this interesting fun fact: the magnificent Allen Lambert Galleria was the result of an international design competition.

PAUL GOLINI JR. IS CHAIR OF THE BUILDING INDUSTRY AND LAND DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION (BILD) AND CAN BE FOUND ON TWITTER (TWITTER.COM/BILDGTA), FACEBOOK (FACEBOOK.COM/BILDGTA), AND BILD'S BLOG (BILDBLOGS.CA).

Teeple's cubist condos

Architect Stephen Teeple puts his stamp on Picasso condominiums
Iconic downtown landmark has 'buildings within buildings' and terraces that jut out on different levels

DUNCAN MCALLISTER
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

First the Warhol Collection and now Picasso. Toronto's condos have an affinity for the arts. Picasso recently opened their new presentation centre at 256 Queen St. West, reminiscent of a gallery of modern art.

Consultant Michael Budovitch was instrumental in the design and marketing of the development, a joint project between the Goldman and Monarch groups.

He says Picasso is a radical departure from the simplified glass towers where all the units are the same, [hopefully] a welcome new trend for Toronto condos.

"We have an iconic landmark building that we're offering to Toronto in the best location in the entertainment district," Budovitch says. "When you look at our building — it's not a traditional glass tower — we have buildings within buildings."

Architect Stephen Teeple has done it again with another of his three-dimensional cubist designs.

Picasso has terraces jutting out on many [different] levels throughout the building. Normally terraces are either on the top or the lower levels of a condo.

"We're looking at all these terraces and we see a lot of greenery so it's integrated with the building," says Budovitch.

"When you're working on a building like this, you have to get your head around it because you have 70 different floor plans. All the units are happening with view in mind and for appropriate location," says Budovitch.

With a few finishing touches still ongoing, the elegant model suite features a deep, commercial-style kitchen sink with appliances hidden behind the cabinetry. In the bathroom, there's slate floors and a soaker tub. There's been no compromise to the details of these units.

"It was great working with Monarch and Goldman because there was pretty well no budget. Mr. Goldman wanted to create a legacy of a building that would stand the test of time, a landmark. Having done buildings over the years, they change from periods. This will be very current at any time."

Also a welcome trend in Toronto, are roomier units, which Picasso has managed to address with their combination suites. This is a condo for life.

"We married a studio with a two bedroom," explains Budovitch. "If a young couple is looking at a two bedroom in the beginning and then their family grows and they need the third bedroom and they have two condo units, two separate entrances, when they retire they'll have a pied-à-terre."

Rumour has it that some of Pablo Picasso's actual artifacts will be on display at the presentation centre. We'll have to wait and see.

DUNCAN MCALLISTER

▶ Pre-construction phase: The life-size version of Picasso condos is set to go up at 318 Richmond St. West. The building will consist of 35 storeys with 373 units.

From wallflower to wall power

Decor expert Karl Lohnes adds a focal wall of colour to a monochromatic room

DESIGN CENTRE

KARL LOHNES
HOME@METRONEWS.CA

I'd like to add some colour to my bedroom but I am afraid to commit. I was thinking about painting just one wall. Are focal walls out of fashion?
D. Richardson
Markham, Ont.

A painted focal wall was a popular way to add colour to a room in the 1980s.

One burgundy or hunter green wall might look a bit outdated these days as today's focal walls are all about adding drama with light or dark neutral colours rather than using colour.

BENJAMIN MOORE

▶ Stardust 2108-40 from Benjamin Moore Paints.

Because you already have a monochromatic colour scheme I suggest keeping your colour choices for a focal wall limited to what is already in the room.

I would paint the wall behind the bed a deep version of a neutral brown colour like Benjamin Moore's Stardust 2108-40; it's got a bit of grey in it to keep the wall fashionably on trend.

CONTRIBUTED

▶ Add some drama to a room by painting the wall behind the bed with a deep, neutral paint colour.

Paint on some drama

A glossy paint finish would help add some drama and reflection from the window into the room. If the wall's finish is smooth and free of bumps or cracks then consider painting the wall with a high gloss paint.

Paint the underside and vertical part of the bulkhead running across the top of the wall; not painting the bulk will visually shorten the overall ceiling height in the room.

Accessorize appropriately

Bring a few darker-toned accessories in the room in order to blend your new wall; a dark throw at the end of the bed, a vase or some decorative pillows in a deep neutral colour will help the wall incorporate easily into your existing room.

Direct the focus

What wall do you paint the focal wall?

- Bedroom: The wall behind the headboard
- Bathroom: The wall with the mirror/lights
- Living room: The wall with the fireplace/or television wall
- Foyer: The wall the door backs onto ▶ White sheets need to be white. Period.

Dear Charles the butler,
I work in the motel business and am looking for a natural stain removal solution for white linens and towels. Currently No Name bleach (which I personally think is a waste of money) and Oxi are being used to no avail... Please help!

Thank you,
Linda

Dear Linda,

Because your question is about commercial laundry cleaning, I thought it best to ask a good friend, Jackie Creed of Creeds Dry Cleaning, what his thoughts were regarding your question.

Jackie said that the first problem is stain identification, because one type of cleaner does not remove all kinds of stains.

So, for example, a food-based stain needs to be removed with a product such as OxiClean®, while an oil-based stain requires a different type of cleaner, one that is petroleum-based.

Remember that "like removes like."

To summarize, my advice would be to determine what your stains are, treat them accordingly and then continue your professional washing program.

Good luck and let us know your results!

THE CHANGING FACE OF OUR CO-HABITATION

LEGAL MATTERS

JEFFREY COWAN
HOME
@METRONEWS.CA

Q. We purchased our home in 2007 and at the time, my partner was not working and had limited resources to contribute to the downpayment or the ongoing household expenses.

We were counselled by our real estate lawyer that we might want to consider a co-habitation agreement. We seriously considered this document but felt the added costs were prohibitive considering we were already stretching our budget to make the downpayment and to cover closing costs.

Now, five years later, we are re-financing our mortgage and the issue has come up again. Luckily, our finances have changed and my partner is on much more stable footing and is contributing on an equal basis. What do you think we should do on a going-forward basis?

A. As one might say, 'you dodged that bullet.' The use of co-habitation agreements is most applicable and important when there is a difference between the contribution of the parties that purchase a property together.

This is even more significant when you are common law partners because there are less stringent property division rules (although this is a moving case by case target).

I think the approach you should take at this time is to attempt to document the historical contributions and both parties acknowledge that if the relationship were to break down in the future that there would be some form of equalization based upon the numbers.

In terms of co-habitation agreements, and in more general terms relationships; although we don't want to over-analyze, over-document and suck the life out of exciting and often romantic events, one should always keep and eye on the 'what if's' because your story could easily be one of conflict rather than congratulations.

U.S. REAL ESTATE HAS BOTTOMED OUT!

7 Deadliest Mistakes All Canadians Make When Buying U.S. Real Estate

Fellow Canadians - a new video series has just recently been released which reveals the 7 costly mistakes that ALL Canadians make when buying U.S. real estate, and a 23 step system that can help you prevent these common mistakes in order to protect your investment.

This video series clearly shows how a typical Canadian loses an average of $30,000 when buying U.S. real estate. The fact of the matter is that the U.S. is a foreign country with an entirely different tax system that the CRA frowns upon – worse yet – with regulations written against foreigners, such as the famous "world estate tax".

Don't just google "U.S. Real Estate" until you watch and learn the proven methods.

This video series exposes the 7 deadliest mistakes that cost Canadians tens of thousands of dollars. The good news is that each and every one of these mistakes are entirely preventable. In answer to these issues, Canada's only active U.S. real estate expert - Steve Martel - has prepared a free video series entitled "Buying U.S. Real Estate The Proven Way".

How to mat and frame a photo

Score major brownie points with your honey this Valentine's Day by presenting them with a pic of the two of you

DIY IDEAS

With Valentine's Day quickly approaching, what better way to celebrate a loved one than with a DIY gift from the heart?

Inspired by DIY Network Canada's 10 Grand In Your Hand, a gift for all to love is a handmade matted and framed photograph (maybe of you and that special someone!).

Follow these simple steps to impress your partner.

1. Select your mat. Place a selection of different coloured mats alongside your photograph and frame to ensure you choose one that enhances the image.

Varying textures can look great too. It is amazing what a difference the right mat can make to a photograph's appearance! You can find a selection of mats at your local craft or art-supply store.

2. Cut the mat to fit the frame. Lay cardboard on your worktable for protection and trace the frame insert onto the mat. Cut using a straightedge and X-Acto knife.

3. Cut an opening. Measure your photograph and allow for about a ½- to 1-inch border around the image to be covered by the mat (make the opening size smaller than the photo).

Sketch the opening on the back of the mat; your picture should be equidistant from both sides of the mat. Using a straightedge and exacto knife, cut along the line in one quick motion and stop precisely in each corner.

4. Mount your photo. Place your photograph upside-down on clean paper to protect the image. Tape a piece of acid-free tape along one side of the photo and allow half of it to hang over the edge.

Flip your photo right-side up and place the mat over top. Once the photo is centered in the mat opening, press down on the tape edge so that the mat and photograph stick together.

5. Do some finishing touches. Being careful not to disturb the photo, turn the mat upside-down. Finish taping the photograph to the mat, ensuring that it stays centered.

6. Frame that puppy. Your work is now ready to be framed. Happy Valentine's Day!

Leafs a go for Classic: Source

The Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs could draw a record crowd for hockey in the NHL's next Winter Classic.

A source confirmed Wednesday the teams would officially be named as participants in the Jan. 1, 2013 game at a press conference Thursday.

The Leafs and Red Wings will face one another at Michigan Stadium, where the current attendance record was set in a game between the Wolverines and rival Michigan State on Dec. 11, 2010. They drew an attendance of 104,173, setting a Guinness World Record.

A pair of venues will be used for the next Winter Classic.

In addition to Michigan Stadium, other games and events will be held at Comerica Park in downtown Detroit.

News of the Leafs-Red Wings matchup has been rumoured for weeks, but the deal was only finalized Wednesday. During a special meeting, the University of Michigan Board of Regents authorized athletic director Dave Brandon to seek a contract with the NHL to host the event.

The NHL has offered to pay up to $3 million US for a license to use the iconic college football stadium, according to the recommendation approved by the board.

Big quarter for Buck

Former Raptor Carlos Delfino scores 11 points in fourth to secure win

Carlos Delfino scored 25 points to help the Milwaukee Bucks past the Toronto Raptors 105-99 on Wednesday with the perimeter play of both teams dominating the game.

Delfino had two three-pointers and 11 points in the fourth quarter against his former team as Milwaukee (11-14) snapped a three-game losing skid.

Dwight Gooden started at centre and scored 20, Stephen Jackson added 17 and Mike Dunleavy came off the bench to score 18.

BUCKS	RAPTORS
105	99

Jose Calderon had nine points and 15 assists for Toronto (8-19), while DeMar DeRozan scored 25 points and pulled down four rebounds.

The Raptors have now lost three in a row.

Milwaukee has won seven of its last eight meetings with the Raptors, including the last three in Toronto.

Jerryd Bayless started at shooting guard for the Raptors, scoring six points in 25 minutes of play. That move allowed DeRozan to start at small forward, with Calderon at point.

Bayless did not return after suffering a sore left ankle in the third. He missed 13 games in January after spraining the same ankle.

Raptors head coach Dwane Casey opted for a smaller starting lineup against the Bucks. That decision allowed the guards and small forwards on both teams to set the pace.

The Raptors fouled Milwaukee throughout the fourth, hoping that Delfino's hand would cool off. Unfortunately for Toronto, the gambit failed as the Bucks proved to be clutch and the Raptors came up short on several of their own field-goal attempts.

Burke rounding into deadline form

JAMIE SABAU/GETTY IMAGES FILE

▶ Are the Leafs shopping Mikhail Grabovski or is GM Brian Burke simply trying to drive down the cost of re-signing the soon-to-be unrestricted free agent?

THE HOCKEY NEWS

ADAM PROTEAU
TORONTO@METRONEWS.CA

You'll hear Maple Leafs general manager Brian Burke say many things about Toronto's roster between now and the NHL's Feb. 27 trade deadline. However, if you take him at face value, do so at your own peril.

Folks, Burke is an advocate first and foremost for the organization. He is a phenomenal asset to media types in need of creative analogies and edgy sound bites, but when he puts something out for the press to gnaw on, it isn't necessarily the truth. If he can use journalists to deliver information that serves the Leafs' interests, it is in his interest to do exactly that.

For instance, Burke recently made comments regarding the contractual status of Mikhail Grabovski.

"If he can use journalists to deliver information that serves the Leafs' interests, it is in his interest to do exactly that."

The soon-to-be unrestricted free agent centre's asking price might be too rich for the team, Burke hinted, leaving the possibility of a trade. Given how important Grabovski has become to the cause — especially of late — Burke's perspective caused some people to lose their minds for a few hours and wonder why he would even think of such a transaction.

Those people probably forgot what Burke might have been doing there: Namely, attempting to drive down Grabovski's agent's salary demands.

After all, if the guy loves playing here as much as he says he does, and he's aware the potential is out there to be moved, it's only natural that he might be willing to take a few less dollars to stick around. That would help Burke as he tries to squeeze as much talent as he can under the league's salary cap ceiling. So if he has to put the fear of God into Grabovski, it's nothing personal, just business.

Other trade rumors will arise in the next couple weeks and Burke will be as coy as ever as he carefully avoids NHL tampering charges, yet still finds ways to give the media an interesting quote. Before you put any stock in any of those rumors, ask yourself this: Was there even the tiniest inclination he was about to acquire Jake Gardiner and Joffrey Lupul from Anaheim for Francois Beauchemin last season? Of course not. Was there a groundswell of newspaper articles or radio chatter in the 2009 off-season before the Phil Kessel deal? There wasn't. In both cases, Burke operated with extreme stealth and the organization leaked nothing to reporters. Why? Because it did the team no great service to do so.

Remember that next time you hear Burke say anything for public consumption. He's a master of media manipulation — and that's why you shouldn't buy into any Leafs trade rumor until they become reality.

Oakland Athletics owner Lew Wolff said Wednesday that indecision by Major League Baseball over whether his club can move to San Jose has been "excruciating" but that he believes the process is finally nearing an end.

Just not as quickly as he'd like.

Taking questions at the downtown Rotary Club of San Jose, Wolff said the uncertainty about the possible move is harming the franchise more than anything. He's hopeful that a resolution from baseball is coming soon.

"I'm not going to continue this much longer," Wolff said. "What we want is an answer. We want a yes, you can relocate and share the district, share the territory. Or you can't. But not having any answer is very difficult."

The A's need approval from league owners to move to the south bay, where the San Francisco Giants hold territorial rights to the technology-rich region filled with fans and corporate dollars. Not to mention the Giants' class-A affiliate is in San Jose. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20
If your sixth sense tells you that something is not quite right today, you would be wise to listen.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21
Cosmic activity in the career area of your chart means it's time to move up a gear. It's OK to be ambitious.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21
Your opinions seem to be going through changes and it may not be an entirely comfortable situation.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 You want to prove that you're tough enough to mix it up with your rivals. But don't make enemies of those who should be friends.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23
Sit back and let those who feel they have something to prove make decisions. You have nothing to prove.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22
If you work too hard now, you may regret it over the weekend. You don't have to do everything yourself, you know. Let others help.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
Focus on creative activities, especially if you've been working your socks off for other people recently.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22
Be prepared to tell someone in a position of authority that you won't be rushed.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 It's not often you kick up a fuss but today, you might have to. No one can tell you how to feel.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20
The planets indicate that it will be quite easy to boost your earning power over the next few days.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18
There's nothing you can't do and there is no one you can't impress. Make your talents recognized.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 You will achieve more in the long-term if you make an effort to co-operate with a colleague. You can both be winners. SALLY BROMPTON
